The Graduate Student Publication Award has been established to recognize outstanding publications by graduate students. An award of up to $500 will be presented annually to a Department of Biological Science graduate student who is the first or sole author of an outstanding paper reporting research conducted at Florida State University. To be eligible for the award, the paper must be accepted for publication in a peer-reviewed journal before defense of the student's thesis or dissertation. The objective of this award is to honor graduate students who produce outstanding papers and to encourage students to publish their work before completion of their degree. This award has been endowed with royalties received for departmental faculty publications.

Any paper accepted for publication between September 1, 2014, and August 31, 2015, is eligible for consideration this year. One copy of the paper and a letter from the student's graduate advisor are to be electronically submitted to rsherrod@bio.fsu.edu, on or before September 28. The advisor's letter should verify that the research reported in the paper was done at Florida State, describe the contribution of the student toward designing and performing the research and writing the manuscript, and comment on the impact the paper has had or likely will have on the student's field of investigation. A committee of faculty representing the three areas of the department will select the winning paper.
